Ratliff

rooted in people

Gregg Levine is a Senior Consultant and Executive Coach at Ratliff. He works with professionals at all levels, including executives and managers, providing coaching and leadership development. Gregg also facilitates group learning experiences through The Leaders Studio. His coaching style is grounded in practical experience from both corporate and non-profit sectors.

Gregg is best known for helping people discover their strengths and navigate personal growth. His talent lies in fostering self-awareness and guiding clients through transitions with empathy and insight. He excels at building collaboration among diverse groups and aligning them toward shared goals. His strategic mindset and people-first approach make him a trusted advisor.

Gregg spent much of his career at BP in roles spanning Sales, Marketing, Strategic Planning, and HR. He led international initiatives in Africa, Australia, and Europe, and oversaw major sales operations in the Midwest. His marketing work included leveraging BP's Olympic sponsorship, which took him to London for the 2012 Summer Games. He brings global business acumen and a collaborative spirit to every engagement.

Gregg lives in Pepper Pike with his husband, Howard, and their Briard, Orli. He's got a sharp wit, a warm heart, and a knack for making people feel seen. With degrees from The Ohio State University, Cleveland State, and Case Western Reserve, he's as credentialed as he is charismatic. Whether coaching or conversing, Gregg brings energy, authenticity, and a touch of flair.
